SMOOT DENIES BANKERS CAUSED 1893 PANIC

Washington, May 22.—Senator Smoot today presented to the senate records of the American Bankers' Association to answer the statement made by Senator Thomas of Colorado several days ago, that the cause of the panic after the passage of the Wilson bill in 1893 was the calling of loans by bankers of the country to secure repeal of the silver purchase act.

Senator Thomas had read an unsigned circular and a magazine article, which asserted the circular was issued at the time by the American Bankers' Association, urging bankers to retire one-third of their silver certificates and call one-half their loans to bring about a money stringency.

Senator Smoot read a letter from Fred E. Fransworth, general secretary of the American Bankers' Association, in reply to a letter written him immediately after Senator Thomas made his speech in the senate. Mr. Fransworth declared the circular referred to by Senator Thomas "was a fraud and a dastardly attack on the American Bankers' Association and the bankers of the country. He set a copy of the records of the American Bankers' Association proceedings for the years 1893 and 1894, wherein appeared an original repudiation of the circular referred to.

From this record Senator Smoot read that the Bankers' Association had its attention called to the circular at the time of the panic and that it had been declared a fraud over the signature of E. H. Bullock, then general counsel for the American Bankers' Association. The records also showed that the circular had been declared fraudulent at a meeting of the executive committee of the American Bankers' Association.

Replying to the denial, Senator Thomas declared he had read the charge published in a reputable American magazine fifteen months before he made his speech, and that in all the time since its publication he had never seen the statements denied.

In his speech to the Senate last week Senator Thomas said he had attempted to show that the panic of 1893 had begun long before the Wilson bill became a law and that it was precipitated by bankers who wished the silver purchase act wiped off the statute books. He continued to declare his belief that the banking interests were responsible for the panic.

"I will ask the Senator if he believes the circular was issued by any responsible authority?" said Senator Smoot.

"Yes," said Senator Thomas. "I think if the money power in this country makes up its mind to accomplish a purpose, it will resort to almost anything."

ADA ELKS BLANK ATOKA

WIN BRILLIANT GAME BY SCORE OF 4 TO 0—ADAPLAYERS IN FINE TRIM.

In one of the best games seen on the local diamond this season The Elks defeated Atoka 4 to 0. Ligon for Ada pitched brilliant ball, allowing one hit and only twenty-eight men facing him. Not an Atoka player reached first base till the eighth inning. His support was gilt-edged, only one error being made and that of a very scratchy order. Another feature of the game was the playing of Ben Tolbert at first base.

Want Teachers to Cut Out Tobacco.

Spokane, Wash., May 23.—Public school teachers who smoke are receiving the fire of the Spokane W. C. T. U., which has requested the board of education to engage no teachers who use the weed in any form. Going a step further they demand that those now on the payroll who are devotees of Lady Nicotine be given their choice of "reforming" or quitting their job. At a public hearing the foes of tobacco declared their belief that some of the school principals use tobacco, that some of them smoke on the streets, and that mothers endeavoring to stamp out the habit in their sons are stumped by the rejoinder, "Teacher smokes, why can't we?" "There is no one who claims smoking is decreasing," said the Rev. J. O. Johnson. "There is no natural tendency among boys to smoke—they do it because they see some one else do it. It is impossible for any teacher who uses tobacco to give sincerely the instruction of the evil effects of the weed, which our state laws require."

The Civic and Cemetery Association meets every Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at L. T. Walters store. All interested in making Ada "The City Beautiful" are urged to join the association.

EIGHTH GRADE RECEIVES DIPLOMAS

SPLENDID PROGRAM RENDERED BY CLASS AT FIRST METHODIST CHURCH.

The eighth grade of the Ada public schools gave their program and received their diplomas Thursday evening in the presence of an audience that packed the Methodist church almost to its full capacity. There were twenty-two members of the class indicating a fair sized class for the high school next year. At the conclusion of the exercises a nice memento was presented Prof. A. Floyd, by the part of the exercises a nice memento was

The program opened with a commencement song by the high school class. This was followed by a humorous sketch by Ernest Word, in which a darkey caught with the goods told a very plausible tale about how he came to be in possession of some chickens belonging to a white neighbor.

Susie Taylor gave the reading "Mona's Waters." She was well prepared and the reading was most excellent. Lucile Harrison then rendered a piano solo in a most creditable manner. Annett Brown was next with a splendid reading: "I Can, I Won't, I Will."

Ollie Weir read an essay on "The Mission of Laughter." She had given the subject close thought and made a very favorable impression. Ada Neal gave a reading entitled: "The Face on the Floor," being a story told by a human wreck of his happier days. It was delivered with splendid effect.

The Irving class sang the class song, "The Land We Love." Guy Woodward followed with the "Dying Speech of Marino Fallero," which he rendered with feeling and effect.

The next number was an original story by Anne Phillips. This young lady is well gifted as a writer and her story, "Ambition Unlocks the Key of Success," would have been a credit to one far more advanced in years.

The Irving Quartet sang the beautiful song, "Star of the Twilight." "The Life of Henry W. Grady" was given by Sherrod Roland. He acquitted himself with high credit.

In the class history Miss Cyndie Walsh created no little amusement by her description and characterization of the various members of the class. Following this came a piano duet by two girls from the high school class. The closing number was a well written essay by Annie Flowers on the subject "Unknown Heroes."

L. T. Walters, president of the school board, then presented the diplomas with a few well chosen words to the youthful students.

The high school class sang another selection and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. C. Stubblefield.

ROCKEFELLER ESTATE ON THE DECLINE

Cleveland, Ohio, May 22.—John D. Rockefeller is rapidly losing his wealth and is becoming practically a poor man, according to the report of John T. Fisher, Tax Assessor for Cleveland Heights, in which place the Forest Hill estate of the oil king is situated.

The figures show that a year ago Rockefeller returned his personal property as worth $7,190. This year, alas, John D. is poorer by $2,905 than he was a year ago. His return of personal property being $4,285.

Last year Rockefeller's farm superintendent included some grain in the returns. John D. objected to that on the ground that the grain was to be used on his estate and that it was not returnable as personal property.

and should not be taxed. This year the grain was missing from the tax duplicate.

The figures show that John D. has nine horses worth $55 each, ten head of cattle worth $40 each and furniture worth $3,300. He has no automobiles here at the time of year the assessments are made, so none is returned for taxation.

Looks like the initiators of the school killing bill wanted to take the best. They included Ada and Alva normals, which rank second and third in attendance, and Alva ranks first in point of buildings and equipment. They seem to be fired more by the spirit of destruction that inspires small boys to smash windows and tear up shade trees rather than looking into the question of what schools are doing most good and entitled to live, if there is need of abolishing any.

Both the state and national government has spent many thousands of dollars to have the fever tick eradicated and the money has been well spent. The fever tick did millions of dollars' damage each year. There is another kind of tick in Oklahoma that does more damage than the cattle tick, however, and no serious effort has been made to eradicate it. It is the (poli) tick.—Chandler Tribune.

Awaiting The Joyful Sound

The Wonderful Music that Bursts Forth When the Stork Arrives.

That funny, little, brassy cry that echoes the arrival of the new baby is perhaps the most cherished remembrance of our lives. And thousands of happy mothers owe their preservation to health and strength to Mother's Friend. This is an external remedy that is applied to the abdominal muscles. It relieves all the tension, prevents tenderness and pain, enables the muscles to expand gently, and, when baby comes, the muscles relax naturally, the form is preserved without laceration or other accident.

You will find Mother's Friend on sale at almost any drug store, as it is one of the standard, reliable remedies that grandmothers everywhere have relied upon.

With its daily use during the period of expectation, there is no weakness, no nausea, no morning sickness, no pain, distress or strain of any kind. Its influence is truly remarkable, as it penetrates the tissues and renders them pliant and easily governed by the demands of nature. You will be surprised at its wonderful effect and what a grateful relief it affords.

Especially to young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences. You will find this wonderful remedy on sale at the store where you trade, or they will get it for you. ## GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Gray and Faded Hair to Its Natural Color.

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hair before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

The growth and beauty of the hair depends on a healthy condition of the scalp. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly kills the dandruff germs which rob the hair of its life, color and lustre, makes the scalp clean and healthy, gives the hair strength, color and beauty, and makes it grow.

Get a fifty-cent bottle from your druggist today. He will give you money back if you are not satisfied after a fair trial. Agents, Gwin & Mays Drug Co., Ada, Okla.—adv.

OLD COMRADES MEET AFTER MANY YEARS

"When I met my old friend, Col. Snead at Lawton a few days ago," said Capt. Sam H. Hargis this afternoon, "he told me about meeting a man by the name of Billy Crane shortly before who said that he knew me in the war, in fact had served in the same company and was one of my own mess. Of course I remembered him for we were very closely attached to each other, but had not met since the war. I hired a rig and drove out to his farm. He came out and I told him my name was Houston and finally led the conversation round to the war. He mentioned Sam Hargis and said he had heard he was in that part of the country and would give the world to see him again. I asked him if he would know him, and he said it had been so long that he was not certain. "You are looking at him now," I told him. The poor fellow was so overcome that he broke down and cried. We had a long talk and he promised to attend the reunion if possible."

They will leave Ada at 6 o'clock and their departure will be announced by the whistles of the cement and electric light plants. As stated before they will march to Stratford the first day, thence to Purcell, Norman and Oklahoma City. They expect to return to Ada on the train Saturday. The News will keep informed of their movements and publish same every day.

Three Killed at Target Practice.

Charleston, S. C., May 22.—Captain Guy B. Hanna, with Privates Baxter and Christian of the United States coast artillery were killed and nine seriously wounded tonight when the breech blew off a 4.7 inch gun at Fort Moultrie. Baxter and Christian were instantly killed and Captain Hanna died on the operating tables.

The explosion occurred at 10 o'clock Thursday night. The calling of several Charleston physicians to the scene resulted in rumors that a serious explosion had occurred.

Reports are conflicting as to the exact manner in which the accident happened. Several of the wounded soldiers are believed to have sustained fatal injuries. On account of the location of the fort only meager details of the accident were obtainable.

A. L. Kennedy, the government demonstration man, returned Thursday afternoon from Bowie, Texas. He says the silo idea has taken hold there and the oil mill has had a 275 ton concrete silo erected as a starter. He also reports fine interest in good roads. A road has been graded all the way to Fort Worth and after every rain the citizens turn out and drag it well.

Sylvia and Bettie, discontented with their respective lots, agree to exchange sweethearts and gowns for the afternoon. With the aid of a magic flower this is accomplished, and Bettie strolls through the woods with De Lacey, and Sylvia spends the afternoon with the sturdy William. Both girls discover the thorns among the roses, and running away from the court poet and farmer, return to the hayfield, determined to regain their own sweethearts and gowns, and resolved to be contented with their stations in life hereafter. The farmers' daughters who had met the farm lads at the stile as promised, returned to the hayfield much alarmed, because they cannot find Bettie, and are overjoyed to find her. William talking to the ladies and gentlemen from the court. Prince Tobbytum, a court dandy, whom the farmer's daughters had met in the morning in the hay field, hearing strange tales from the ladies Arabelle and Araminta of De Lacey and Sylvia, endeavors to make trouble, but his endeavors are frustrated. ## HAS OKLAHOMA TOO MANY NORMALS

The following interesting communication appeared in the Bokchito News, from a subscriber, which we reproduce, as it is full of truth and to the point:

Oklahoma has six normal schools established in different parts of the state, for the purpose of furnishing the public schools of our state with trained and efficient teachers. Some of our citizens contend that these schools should be more centralized, in order that our taxes may be lowered and their efficiency increased.

I believe the distribution of educational advantages, and I do not see how the centralizing of our normal schools would lower the cost of maintaining them or increase their efficiency.

This is a question that even our school men may differ upon, for if we agree upon the educational needs of our state we may yet differ on the best way of attaining them.

The superintendent of public instruction of the state of Maine, in speaking along this line, has this to say: "Our experience tends to show that the placing of institutions in various parts of the state has a tendency not only to increase considerably the total enrollment, but likewise has a large influence in upbuilding educational standards in the various sections of the state." Dr. Howerth of Chicago University, makes the following observation: "Oklahoma, I observe, has, on the one hand, an unusually large number of state educational institutions, though it is surpassed in that respect by some of the older states—notably Pennsylvania and New York. On the other hand it has relatively few privately endowed schools and colleges; very few in comparison with Kansas and Missouri, each with about a score, not to speak of Iowa with twenty-three or Ohio with thirty-three. Theoretically this should be an advantage, for it should be easier to systematize the educational work of a state in which provision for education is made almost wholly by the state. And system if not obtained at the expense of virility is in education as in business, essential to the highest economy and efficiency."

Let us look upon our beginning in education in Oklahoma as the leading educators of other states do, and if, perchance, we do decide we have too many, let us remember we may be building for the future.

We have not got too many state normal schools. We have only one for every 283,000 inhabitants of our state, which is a greater pro rata population than either California, South Dakota, North Dakota, Alabama, Prussia or France.

The average cost of training a teacher in the normal schools of Oklahoma is only $60, while the average cost of training teachers in the United States is $107.00. This shows that the Oklahoma teacher is trained $47 cheaper than the average of the United States. You say there is a difference in the training; there is. Oklahoma normal school's course of study compares with those of the best normal schools in any state and is far ahead of many. She offers nineteen courses in education, method and general pedagogy.

This mission of the normal school is to train the teacher to teach, not merely to teach him a few rules in methods and management and then send him out to see whether or not he can put these rules in practice, but by actual practice and observation train him in the profession. To accomplish this end there must be a certain number of children going to the normal school. The number of children heeded will vary as the number of teachers going will vary. The state superintendent thinks that, in normals having no preparatory department four children to one teacher may be considered satisfactory. Can we centralize our normals on this account? Suppose we had only three normal schools and there should be five hundred teachers enrolled, where would the children be found for the training department? How many teachers would drag along in the profession five or six years and quit if they had to go to Oklahoma City to get their training?

We pay only 12 cents on the $1,000 to maintain the six normal schools, far less than the tax required to maintain our state prisons. I believe that any citizen will agree that our normal schools, in training of teachers, who are largely Christian men and women, is one of the strongest agencies in the suppression of vice.

If we are a friend of education and believe that every young person should find a place to live and work wherein his best latent powers will be called into service, and where the light of hope and faith may shine on undimmed until the end of day, let us write our governor and legislators a letter pleading for the preservation of our normal schools.

The DAUGHTER of DAVID KERR

by Harry King Tootle

"But you've got a telephone." Then he added in a gentler tone: "That's all right, Amos, I've always understood." It seemed to be with an effort that he continued, "I'm going to tell you some things that you know, and some things that you don't know, and some you've guessed, and some I've thought nobody'd ever have to know. 'Bout the time you come here I was married, and my wife died on giving birth to a girl."

"Gloria." "Yes, Gloria. I was just gittin' into politics. Things might 'ave been different if my wife had lived. It didn't seem long before there I was with a big girl on my hands—me, David Kerr." The old feeling of power surged through him as he added with spirit, "If it had been a boy!"

This thought held him silent for a minute, and when he took up the thread of his story again it was the old weary tone.

"Well, it wasn't. There I was with a girl on my hands. Her mother didn't have any relatives. Her father was a minister, same's my father was. I didn't have anybody, either, I could send her to. I kept her as long as I could, but by that time my house—even in the country—wasn't a fit place for a child—specially a girl. So I sent her away to school and she ain't been back since. I reckon Belmont's forgot about her. I gave her plenty of money, but she never knew anything of my—transactions. She thinks I made it all in real estate."

"Then she doesn't know—"

"That's the hell of it—she don't."

Kerr could sit still no longer. He pulled himself out of his chair and stood with his back to the fire and directly facing Gilbert. "All these years I've acted a lie. I've made Gloria believe I'm the leading man in Belmont. I am—but not in the way she thinks. It wasn't because I loved her; I can't say I do, 'cause I don't know her well. I ain't been east to see her for a couple of years. It was pride made me tell her that; that's what it was, pride. I wanted my girl to have what I'd missed. I didn't want her to know."

He lapsed into silence, which he finally broke himself with the explanatory remark:

"Gloria thinks I'm the social leader of Belmont; that the whole town hangs breathless on what I say shall be the fashion at pink teas."

"Hasn't she often wanted to come back?"

Kerr was not to be hurried. He began to pace up and down in front of the fireplace. When he paused, the lawyer, to secure a continuation of the story, said:

"Well?"

"This morning she came home."

Now Judge Gilbert understood; yet he could scarcely believe it possible. "What! Gloria here!"

"Yes, here," echoed Kerr. "Come home, that's what she calls it. She's been visiting school friends since she came back from Japan, and had just started to California when the party fell through when they'd got to St. Louis. So she jumped on the train and came to Belmont unannounced—to surprise me."

So here was Gloria in Belmont. It was more than embarrassing. Gilbert recognized that it was tragic. Kerr never mentioned his daughter, and Belmont had almost forgotten her existence. Much that the boss had told the lawyer was news to him. Gloria Kerr, the little girl, had been allowed to slip out of his mind and he had come to regard the political leader, just as every one else did, as a thing apart, as a power almost as impersonal as the force of gravity or the freezing of water. The easy boss was regarded as just as much a Belmont fixture as was the river which flowed past the town, and those good people who laid aside the rose-colored spectacles of Belmont's laissez faire doctrine felt that it would be just as easy to remove one as the other.

The lawyer in Gilbert now rose to the surface and he began to question Kerr just as he would a client. The girl was here. The only thing now to discuss was what to do with her.

"She can't help but learn the truth!" Gilbert exclaimed at last.

He sank back in his chair, overcome by the weight of the problem. On the wall, where he could see it, hung the picture of his own daughter, Julia, now away at school, and the bitterness of the whole thing was brought home to him all the more poignantly because he, too, was a father.

The hopelessness of Gilbert's tone when he declared Gloria would learn the truth if she remained roused Kerr to his old self. When he had entered the room he seemed crushed beyond recovery. Now he suddenly developed all the spirit, all the calm resourcefulness, which he had ever displayed when listening to the report of some political revolt which would call forth hitherto latent strength.

"She must not know," he replied with all his old dominance. "Listen to me, Amos Gilbert—that girl must be recognized. I know what people say of me, and I've abided by the verdict. I ain't been no hypocrite. I've played a man's game, and I've dealt with men. I ain't asked nothin' of your women folk, but now I do. I'm bringing Belmont a girl any of you could be proud of. She's got to be looked up by the right people—I've kept her away all these years, and she don't know my story, and I don't intend she shall. She's the equal of any girl in Belmont, and, by God, she'll have an equal chance."

"What can I do?" asked Gilbert.

It was for this Kerr had waited. It was for this moment that he had called the past to mind. He had wanted Gilbert to have before him the many obligations under which he rested. It is true that he could have commanded, but he was too much the easy boss to issue orders where he could hold forth a glittering reward as the price of valuable services. To the ward healer the word of the boss is a fetish to be blindly worshipped. To his few leading lieutenants the command is coated with sugar which has a negotiable value. Gilbert having asked what he could do, brought Kerr at once to the arrangement he had planned whereby the lawyer would profit through the introduction of Miss Kerr to society.

"I've made bargains all my life, Amos,—tonight I make one with you. Prosecuting attorney, judge, corporation counsel, with all the money you've made—"

At this Gilbert made a disparaging gesture which caused Kerr to add, "in fees—with all the money you've made, you still fall short of the riches that'll purchase real freedom. I know how you stand, and things are pretty much in the balance."

"Think what it means to your daughter, money." As he spoke he pointed to the girl's picture. "It's leisure, travel, friends abroad, an assured future. I can give them to you, I, David Kerr; and I will—on one condition. Gloria Kerr must have the place she thinks is hers in Belmont."

He paused to let the lawyer grasp the importance and the value of such an undertaking, and then disclosed the means by which the fortune was to be secured. If a man should ever pay another out of his own pocket for such a service he would be a philanthropist and not a political leader; Kerr was certainly not the former, and his life training had never caused him to separate a dollar from his own bank account when he could extract it without pain—to him—from some one else.

"For this one thing," he exclaimed, "I give freely into your hands any franchise you may draw for the stockyards belt line railway. Disguise it as a street railway line to run down Maple avenue. Make what bargain you like, five hundred thousand, a million dollars, it's worth it. And always remember, I'm back of you."

The possibilities of the scheme overwhelmed Gilbert. What he was to do for Kerr, even the fight for the franchise, did not enter his mind. He was busy thinking of the freedom he could purchase in so short a time. All that he had ever dreamed of could be brought to pass. Kerr, who knew almost to a dollar the financial standing of every man in Belmont, was well aware that Gilbert had been hard hit in several stock exchange transactions, so badly in the last one that he had called upon the boss for assistance. Yet he had just told Kendall that he would have nothing more to do with that kind of work. He had begun to develop a conscience—for Julia's sake, perhaps, for his daughter's future—and here came Kerr who wanted him to go down once more into the maelstrom of shady politics for the sake of his daughter.

His gratitude for what Kerr had done for him was great enough to cause him to do anything for Kerr's daughter he could, but since the boss had put it up to him and he had back of him all the boss's power, he began to wonder why he should not accept the opportunity to make a fortune quickly. It had been held out to him as meaning leisure, travel, friends and a rosy future for his Julia. He longed for those things for himself, no less, and here was the chance of his lifetime. He would know how to make those Chicago schemers pay well for the legal advice he would give them.

"It won't be easy," said Gilbert finally.

Kerr had won his first victory. The lawyer had surrendered.

"That's why I came to you," was the boss's answer, a reply charged with subtle flattery. Gilbert really did represent in his autocracy the best element; a smug set, perhaps, but still the best. To other lieutenants were delegated hammer and tong jobs; Gilbert was the instrument when finesse was required.

"There's a certain element, Mr. Kerr, it will be hard to win over—that wholesale clique. You have no direct dealing with the men, and—well—that is—you see, they don't know you and they might not be interested in Gloria. They're a clanish lot."

"I've fought many a fight, Amos, but never one like this. If it develops into a real fight, I still hold the whip hand." He raised his right arm menacingly, his hand clenched to a pugna-cious fist. "Let any silly girl sneer at my daughter, let any nunny of a boy be uncomplimentary, and I no sooner hear of it than I'll put the screws on—and then God help 'em. They don't know me! Well, they may yet."

"When can Mrs. Gilbert meet Gloria?"

"I brought her with me—she's in the carriage."

"She came with you?"

"Yes, I told her we were going to the theater. Then we stopped here on important business."

"Bring her in. I'll call Mrs. Gilbert."

While Kerr went for his daughter, the lawyer called his wife into the library and explained the situation to her as best he could in so brief a time. He only told of Gloria's belief in her father's social importance, nothing of how he had promised to introduce her. Of course his wife would never know his wages for acting as Gloria's sponsor.

"What a remarkable thing to do!" exclaimed Mrs. Gilbert when she finally realized Gloria's position.

"I think Kerr was crazy, Julia, ever to start it, but here she is in our house and we must help carry out the deception."

"But Dr. and Mrs. Hayes?"

"Who made Hayes coroner?"

"But Mr. Wright? Will he meet David Kerr?"

"Mr. Wright's our guest and he's a gentleman, dear."

Here was something Gilbert had not thought of. Perhaps fate was playing into his hands. He hoped so anyway. David Kerr would meet on neutral ground the man who had already caused him some uneasiness. Since the boss never called on any one, and since Wright surely would not go to see him, this was, when all was said and done, to be an important meeting.

DON'T TRIFLE WITH COUGHS OR COLDS.

Many Have Filled Consumptive Graves Because They Neglected a Cough or Cold.

You never know how soon a cold will become a serious malady. It may be in the head to-day; in the lungs to-morrow and the next day you may be fighting deadly pneumonia for your life. It's much the same with a cough. Inflamed and cough-worn throat and lungs offer the best chance to consumption germs to begin their murderous work. There's only one way to prevent these deadly diseases getting a hold on you. As soon as a cough or cold attacks you, take Dr. King's New Discovery until you are entirely cured. Sometimes a dose or two will do the business, saving you suffering and a doctor's bill. Thousands of cures like these below prove its wonderful power to cure coughs and colds.

"I feel sure it's a Godsend to humanity," writes Mrs. Effie Morton,

Columbia, Mo., "for I believe I would have consumption to-day, if I had not used this great remedy."

"I take great pleasure in recommending your Dr. King's New Discovery for the benefit of suffering humanity. It's a thoroughly reliable remedy for all coughs, croup and lung troubles. We have used it in our family for fourteen years with the best results. It saved my mother when two doctors gave her up. She had a very severe case of pneumonia and was in bed seven weeks and part of the time 'out of her mind' so that she did not know me. I told father to get me two 50c bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery, which he did, and on taking it she soon began to improve, and four bottles cured her entirely. You may publish this if you wish and I will answer all inquiries, with postage enclosed for reply."

"Yours respectfully,

Marrying Without Being in Love.

In the June Woman's Home Companion Mary Heaton Vorse writes a story in which one of her characters, Helen Payne, a New England girl eighteen years old becomes engaged only to find that she does not love the man she has promised to marry. On the general subject of breaking marriage promises, according to the old New England manner, Mrs. Vorse goes on:

"She was going to offer herself, a little white offering, before the altar of the fetish which decrees that we shall keep our promises. Herding her to this doom were all the cruel things which we teach young girls. In New England in my day we did not joke about engagements. In her innocence, having given her lover her mouth to be kissed and her hand to be held and having promised to be his, she had definitely decide that in the sight of God she was his."

"I suppose that had I made up my mind to do what Ellen did at that age, I would have gone through to the iniquitous end, shut my eyes and quieted my rebellious spirit with sophistries. I would have done according to whichever part of the strange anomalous teaching which we give young girls I believed in most. Had I believed most that it is the crime of crimes to marry without love, I would have frankly made up my mind to break the engagement but had I believed that one may love but once that an engagement is a marriage of the spirit, and that in giving this I had given so much to one man that I had nothing left for any other—it is strange, but this is still taught to girls today—I should have traveled that terrible road."
